

Good Presentation Advice

- Use big fonts and pictures (Bullet Points – 24pt).
- Speak clearly and slowly.
- Practice your presentation.

$$F_{1,2} = G \frac{m_1 m_2}{r_{1,2}^2}$$

One picture is worth 1000 words.
- Ancient Proverb

An MPEG is worth a thousand JPEGs!
- Ancient Proverb Updated

Figure 7: An example of good font size and line count. Description: this slide shows an example of good text size, amount of text and use of pictures. Explanation: if projected on a screen, all the details on this slide would be visible from the far side of the room; the bullets on this slide are appropriately short, highlight the main points and can quickly read. Implication: if an audience is given too much text to read while a speaker is presenting, it is unlikely to be actively listening to what the speaker is saying; the audience is more likely to remember text if they have to read less of it; note also that shorter bullet points lend themselves better to semantic splitting.